

Nyle Deangelo

The Admin (CRUD ACCESS) (Possible video access?)

Born to an all death family. Learned different forms of Sign language, ASL, PSE, SEE through interaction with his parents and in-home teachers. "Valuable to have someone in close vicinity working with you encouraging the study of sign language". Later, Nyle continued into higher education teaching and attained a Ph.D. foreign languages. Focused on writing articles about deaf culture and sports through his career. Now Nyle would like to start a video school system that could enable more people to learn sign language, teach deaf culture and have access to resources.

Sara Kingsler

The Teacher (CRU ACCESS) (Video Access)

"The first week of learning sign language in class, the professor never spoke. Communicated through rough sign language and writing it down and signing the words."

This was a powerful tool that she learned early on. From there, she went on to study with a variety of deaf groups and conducted video sessions with deaf pin pals. Sarah is a musician and has learned that signing is more fun and easier to learn when used in relaying a song someone likes. She is now a seasoned interpreter and would like to help more people learn the 3rd most spoken language here in America.

Rebecca Hart

The User (RU ACCESS) (Video Access)

Rebecca is just starting out in high school in Tallahassee and they only offer one American Sign Language course at her school. Unfortunately, the class filled giving priority to students who have deaf family members. Rebecca wants to learn more about the deaf community, culture, and learn to communicate through sign language and there are no classes in her area outside of school. She has been studying some books, and internet videos for the past 2 years and is still not fluent due to trouble staying motivated. Her best tool was a video dictionary of sign language and she is interested in taking online face to face video classes.
